S. W. JAMISON, General Manager

Many women have good reason to dread the approach of the hour of maternity. All too frequently it is a time of almost unbearable pain and suffering and extreme danger. Women who are wise know that this is unnecessary. They know that the woman who takes proper care is minecessary. They know that the woman who takes proper care of her womanly self, who looks after the health of the organs that make motherhood possible, need have no fear of approaching maternity. They know that there is a sure and safe cure for all weakness and disease of these organs. Over 90,000 of these women have testified in writing to the virtues of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

It is the discovery of Dr. R. V. Pierce, a regularly graduated physician and an eminent and skillful specialist, who is and for thirty years has been chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y. The "Favorite Prescription" makes the organs of womanhood strong and healthy. It cures all weakness and disease. It prepares for approaching maternity. It does away with the discomforts of the expectant period. It alleviates the pains of parturition and makes baby's advent easy and safe. Druggists sell more of it than of all other remedies for these troubles combined. combined.

Combined.

Woman should know herself. She should not be dependent in every emergency, great and small, upon a physician. She should be familiar with her own physical make-up. Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Advisor will reveal a world of important truths to the woman who is ignorant upon these points. It contains many chapters and illustrations devoted to the reproductive physiology of women. It is written in plain, straightforward language. The book contains over 1,008 pages. A paper-covered copy will be mailed absolutely FREE to any one who sends twenty-one one-cent stamps, to cover the cost of mailing only, to the World's Dispensary Medical Association, No. 663 Main Street, Buifalo N. THE TWO JACKS.

Mr. Jack Harding, aged 45, and his nephew, Jack Harding, 20 years youner, lived in Brixton.

They belonged to the same club, and, in spite of the difference in their ages, moved in the same set.

Foremest in the train of Angela Prud-nell's admirers was Jack Harding; but. although Angela was kinder to him than attrough angels was killer to him than to any of the others, he yet lacked cour-age to risk a possible rejection. ' The Prudnells gave a ball, and Jack made up his mind to take the first opportunity of declaring his love. It was late when he arrived, and he looked anxiously around for his ladylove. He discovered her quite at the end of the room, conversing animately with his Uncle Jack. The crowd was large, and it was several minutes before he could reach them.

In the meantime Mr. Jack Harding and Miss Prudnell were talking.

"Miss Angela," said Uncle Jack, "I never saw anything so beautiful as those orchids."

"I am ashamed to confess it," answered Miss Prudnell, "but I actually do not care for them."

Mr. Harding was shocked. He had an unbounded admiration for orchids and thought every one else should see their beauties.

"Why, my dear Miss Angela, do you know, I positively adore".—

"Beg pardon, Miss Prudnell, but this is our waltz," interrupted a gentleman, and thus Mr. Harding lost his chance of telling her why he adored—orchids Jack walked about, vexed at himself for missing his chance, until the evolu-tions of the dance brought Angela almost to his side as the last strains of the music died away.

Going up to her, he offered her his arm and led her to the conservatory. There Jack fondly imagined his tale of love could be easily told.

Not so. The glowing words of the speech he had so carefully composed forseok his tongue. He sat by Angela's side for some moments, talking of indifferent things, trying in vain to recall them. At last, in despair, he spoke:
"Angela, you know I adore you.

me, Angela; you know I adore you.

Angela; you love me a little, and—marry me, Angela;'

"I have found you at last, Miss Prudnell," broke in a joyous voice, and the tall form of one of Jack's friends loomed up before them.
"Confound the man!" he muttered beneath his breath; then, turning to Angela, he said:

"Ah, Miss Prudnell, that little matter we were discussing, you know, Would you kindly drop me a note at the club in the morning, telling me what you will do?"

Angela promised to send the note and passed out of the conservatory. Jack's waking thought the next morn ing was of Angela's letter awaiting him at the club. He hurried off as soon as possible and asked for his letters.

"There is none for you," said the Jack sank into a chair. She intended to refuse him, after all, and could not bring herself to write the unkind words. She did not love him.

Then came a wild desire to get away —away from all that might remind him of her, and he rushed out of the room and ran full tilt into his uncle. they had recovered themselves the uncle

Jack started in amazement, unable to

"You see, Jack, at the ball last night I was talking with a young lady about orchids. I leaned over her—alas! I fear too devotedly—and said, 'My dear Miss ——, I positively adore'— and before I could finish some fellow came up and took her away. This morning I received a note from her saying she accepted my interrupted offer, had loved me a long while and called me 'Dear Jack!' Do you understand? She thought I meant I adored her instead of orchids. Angela Prudnell has always been a great favorite of mine, but I don't want to marry.

"I'll do my best, Uncle Jack, to help

Young Jack went straight to Angela and explained how nearly he had missed getting the letter and also of his undilemma.

When Jack returned to the club, his uncle was still there. He came up to him, and his eyes asked the question his lips dared not ask.

'It's all right, uncle," aunoanced Jack, "I have Angela's promise that she will be my wife.

"Bless you, Jack! You are a noble. self sacrificing friend!" cried Mr. Harding as he dropped into a chair, with a long sigh of relief. "And now for the

It took several minutes for Jack Harding, Sr., to recover from his astonishment, but when he did so he gave Jack the money.

'It will help to start the home," he taid. And thus Jack got $10,000 and a wife, -London News, OUTWITTING AN EDITOR.

An Exciting Political Scheme In Which McCuilagh Figured. When David R. Francis was a candidate for governor of Missouri, friends succeeded in using The Globe-Democrat to further his chances of election. Editor McCullagh had turned on "Our Dave," as Mr. Francis is known in St. Louis, with his short paragraphs with telling effect, and Francis' friends ot together and concected a scheme to offset the editorial work of the paper. They wrote out a display advertisement, and at a late hour of the Saturday morning immediately preceding the election of 1888 took it to the counting room of The Globe-Democrat. The clerk on duty gave the copy a casual looking over and without a word accepted it. It occupied a full page, and at length and in glowing terms set forth the "great business capacity and eminent qualifications of Mr. Francis to occupy the gubernatorial chair of Missouri,

That advertisement caused the biggest row ever witnessed in a newspaper office in St. Lenis. When Editor Me Cullagh found what had been done, he raged and stormed for a week. The first mail had distributed the paper all over Missouri before McCullagh had his at-tention called to it. He left his quarters at the Southern hotel on a trot. Reaching the corner of Fourth and Pine streets, he found the streets and the office of The Globe-Democrat jammed with people, who were clamoring to stop their subscriptions. McCullagh had filled a column on the editorial page with "squibs" strongly opposing Franeis and advocating the Republican nomince, but the big display of Francis' friends was the first thing seen on opening the paper,

Mr. McCullagh at once issued an extra, in which he deprecated the oversight by which the advertisement had found its way into the paper, but it was some time before The Globe-Demcerat office recovered its equilibrium.-St. Louis Letter in Chicago Record.
